Course Description:

The fourth-year Russian 2 course will explore the theory and practice of translation and interpretation from Russian to English and English to Russian as both a craft and an art with its own standards and obligations. Theoretical investigations will consider translation as a sociolinguistic activity: i.e., as an act of mediated communication with the understanding of cultural norms, expectations, and social context of the source and target languages. We will examine various genres of oral and written texts with the focus on specific structural features of Russian and English grammar, morphology, and syntax fundamental to producing successful translations. During the semester, each student will participate in group projects and present a number of individual projects. There won't be any tests or exams in this course. The final grade will be based on individual and group work (see Evaluation of Grades). By the end of each week, the instructor will email you the next week syllabus and assignments.

Objectives:

By the end of the course students will be able to *identify and locate the tools required to carry out non-literary and literary translations from Russian to English and English to Russian;

*recognize and apply the basic theoretical principles (especially linguistic) involved in textual translation;

*execute non-literary translations from Russian to English and from English to Russian with a substantial lexical, syntactical, and semantic accuracy;

*translate literary texts from Russian to English and to defend judgments about the quality of such literary translations based on relevant linguistic and literary norms;

*perform short and long consecutive interpreting (CI) from Russian to English and English to Russian with a substantial accuracy and speed.

Attendance and absences:

This class meets three times a week. Students are expected to attend all classes and be on time. Students will receive daily grades for each meeting of the course. Attendance will be recorded each class. Attendance is mandatory for all class sessions. The instructors will not review or re-teach material to students who were absent from class.

Academic Integrity:

By remaining enrolled in the course, you not only agree to abide by the stipulations of this course overview, but also understand that we will follow rigorously the rules spelled out in the Handbook on Integrity regarding cheating, plagiarism, etc. It is your responsibility to familiarize yourself with these rules and observe them. Any infraction will be penalized accordingly.

Plagiarism:

As "Student Obligations and Adjudication" (University Policy 02-03-03) states, "students have an obligation to exhibit honesty, and to respect the ethical standard of his (their) chosen profession in carrying out (their) academic assignments". According to the University of Pittsburgh's policy, a student "violates this obligation" if he/she: "a) presents as one's own, for academic evaluation, the ideas, representations, or works of another person or persons without customary and proper acknowledgement of sources; b) submits the work of another person in a manner which represents the work to be one's own; c) knowingly permits one's work to be submitted by another person without the instructor's authorization".

The penalties for academic misconduct like plagiarism can be very severe. The immediate consequence of plagiarism will be receiving a grade zero for the particular assignment and can lead to an F for the course.
